FEATURES

- Rodgers & Hammerstein: Masters of the American Musical Fifty years ago composer Richard Rodgers asked lyricist and playwright Oscar Hammerstein II to collaborate on a new Broadway musical. The result was Oklahoma!—and a 17-year partnership that ushered in a golden era in American musical theatre.
- 24 DuckTales: The Movie Treasure of the Lost Lamp

In his feature debut, that eccentric jillionaire from Duckburg, Scrooge McDuck, leads an intrepid band of adventurers in search of the lost treasure of Collie Baba. This Disney MovieToon salutes the wacky and irreverent slapstick of the classic Disney comic books, the medium that gave birth to Scrooge McDuck himself.

A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

The other day, I was seeing spots. Literally. That's what happens when you take Pongo and Perdita, the stars of 101 Dalmatians, for a walk.

Every Disney animated film presents unique challenges for our artists. But 101 Dalmatians offered one challenge in particular. And it was a nearly insurmountable one: all those spots. The animators were simply unable to accurately and consistently draw the millions of spots that were needed to depict all 101 of those dalmatians in the film.

Keep in mind that an animated movie consists of 24 drawings every second. So, if a scene called for just five dalmatians, each with 25 spots, animators would have had to draw 3,000 spots for every second of film.

Any other filmmaker would have been tempted to change the title to 101 Cocker Spaniels. But not Walt Disney. He was determined to make the film right.

Walt was always interested in using the latest technology in his movies, so he found a technological answer to the spot problem. He got his engineers to devise a new xerographic process to help the animators produce all those spots.

The result is a film in which every spot on every dalmatian is in exactly the right place...and they all add up to one of the most enjoyable of all the Disney animated classics.

This July, you will get the chance to count up all the spots yourself when 101 Dalmatians comes to a theater near you.

But, to save you the trouble, we did some calculating of our own and here are the results: Pongo has 72 spots, Perdita has 68, each puppy has 32, and the entire film has a grand total of 6,469,952 spots.

I hope you'll be seeing spots yourself when you spend some time with Pongo, Perdita, the Darlings and, yes, even Cruella De Vil, at a theater near you this summer.

Meg and Michael shown smaller than actual size.

The dolls' seated height is 9½ inches; their length is approximately 14 inches.

Meg & Michael

by Jennifer Schmidt

Snuggled together, these remarkably lifelike dolls are simply adorable!

wice the joy and twice the love...twins are one of life's most special blessings. Nothing tugs at the heartstrings more sweetly than two little tykes who look alike — and can't bear to be apart for more than a moment. Now, the extraordinary closeness between a twin brother and sister has been warmly captured in Meg and Michael by Jennifer Schmidt — irresistible twin dolls, available exclusively from the Danbury Mint.

Exquisitely sculpted and lovably lifelike!

The head, arms and lower legs of each doll are handcrafted of fine bisque porcelain. Every adorable detail of their faces...from their shy little smiles to their plump rosy cheeks...is lovingly hand-painted. Their blond hair is arranged by hand—his boyishly tousled; hers in an endearing topknot. Jennifer Schmidt's signature is inscribed in the porcelain on the back of each doll, assuring you and future generations of your family of its authenticity.

Expertly hand-tailored, Meg and Michael's pink and blue costumes are as cute as can be.

Meg and Michael will radiate their irresistible charm in any room of your home.

Charming hand-tailored outfits.

Meg's high-waisted dress features a pink and white striped skirt and polka-dot bodice. The crisp white collar—trimmed with satin and lace — is finished with a floral-print sailor tie. To add the perfect finishing touches, Meg also wears white gathered bloomers, white anklets and darling sandals.

Michael's blue striped sailor jacket and white sailor pants are banded with blue ribbon. His sailor's tie, white socks and oxfords complete his nautical costume.

A remarkable collector value — exclusively from the Danbury Mint.

Meg and Michael are surprisingly affordable at just $72.50 each (including shipping and handling). The total price for the pair of dolls is payable in five convenient monthly installments of just $29. For added convenience, you may charge your installments to a major credit card.

These charming dolls are available exclusively from the Danbury Mint. Your complete satisfaction is guaranteed. If you are not delighted, you may return your dolls within 30 days of receipt for a replacement or refund.

We anticipate an unprecedented demand for Meg and Michael. Reservations will be fulfilled on a first-come, first-served basis. Avoid disappointment by returning your Reservation Application today!

OUR READERS WANT TO KNOW

Could you tell me what Walt Disney's favorite food was?

—C.K., Bellevue, WA

Walt had a passion for chili and beans. According to his biographer, Bob Thomas, Walt "was a connoisseur, preferring to combine a can of Gebhardt's, which had much meat and few beans, with a can of Dennison's, which had less meat and more beans."

I have a war bond certificate from the World War II era that features many of the Disney characters. I can identify all except a baby with a little blue coat and a bow tie. Who is he?

-K.G., Shiner, TX

The baby on the certificate is Baby Weems from the Disney feature The Reluctant Dragon. As an aside, June marks the 50th anniversary of the release of that film, which featured a tour of the Disney Studio led by humorist Robert Benchley.

In Pollyanna, what building was used for the exterior and interior filming of Aunt Polly's house?

-M.S., Lancaster, CA

The exteriors were filmed on location in Santa Rosa, California, at what was then the residence of a Mrs. Julliard McDonald. The home of Mr. Pendergast was filmed some 40 miles away in the Napa Valley. All the interiors were filmed at the Disney Studios in Burbank.

Looking Back MERCHANDISING THE MOLISE

Shoppers are so accustomed to seeing the wide variety of Disney merchandise on store shelves today that it is hard to imagine a time before you could buy a Mickey Mouse doll, book, toothbrush, or pair of bedroom slippers. Actually, it all started by chance back in 1929. Walt Disney was walking through a hotel lobby in New York, and a man came up to him asking if he could put Mickey Mouse on a children's pencil tablet he was manufacturing. He offered Walt Disney $300, and as Walt needed the money, he agreed. That tablet began Disney licensing. Within a year, the first Mickey Mouse book and comic book had been licensed, and other items followed.

In 1932, a major change in Disney licensing occurred with the appearance of Kay Kamen. Kamen, a born entrepreneur, convinced Walt that licensing could open up whole new vistas for the company. For the next 17 years, until he died in a plane crash, Kamen handled the licensing of Disney merchandise. Insisting on quality control, Kamen set the standard for character licensing that would later be copied by many others. Some 62 years after that first pencil tablet, Disney merchandising is still going strong.

Sunday Night Showcase CLASSIC ROCK 'N' ROLL SUMMER

Beginning in July and extending through September, Sunday Night Showcase (Sundays at 9:00 p.m., ET/PT) presents "Classic Rock 'N' Roll Summer." The music ranges from the sound of Motown to the Mersey Beat, from the days of rockabilly and Sun Studios to the first waves of the British invasion. The fare contains such great documentaries as Rock and Roll: The Early Days as well as special editions and select episodes of Ready Steady Gol, the British TV series from the early '60s that showcased the talents of The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, and The Who, among others. Serving as the centerpiece of the festival is the star-studded special A Tribute to John Lennon.

It all begins on July 14 with Rock and Roll: The Early Days. On July 21, it's a special edition of Ready Steady Go! featuring rare footage of The Beatles. Other legendary performers appearing on Sunday Night Showcase in July and August include The Rolling Stones (July 28), Otis Redding (August 4), plus the documentary British Rock: The First Wave (August 11), The Dave Clark Five (August 18), and the salute to John Lennon on August 25.

The Magical World of Disney FAMILY CLASSICS

Three great family films come your way on The Magical World of Disney in July and August. A Swiss family is marooned after the ship they're sailing in runs aground in the classic Disney adventure Swiss Family Robinson (July 28), adapted from Johann Wyss's beloved novel. Using their wits, and their ship's wreckage, the courageous Robinsons transform their island into a demi-

Classic Rock 'N' Roll Summer A TRIBUTE TO JOHN LENNON (1940-1980)

Fate plays grotesque tricks. Why else would 1990 have marked the 50th birthday, had he lived, of John Lennon—and the 10th anniversary of his assassination? That's a question best not contemplated; it's better to celebrate the legacy of John Lennon, one of the most influential songwriters of his generation.

And celebration there is in the special A Tribute to John Lennon. Hosted by Michael Douglas, the program features today's most celebrated musicians performing Lennon's songs, from the Lennon-McCartney days to his solo career and his partnership with Yoko Ono.

A few of the highlights: Elton John singing "Imagine," a stunning rendition of "Come Together" by Michael Jackson, Billy Joel's rousing and rowdy cover of "Back in the U.S.S.R.," "Let It Be," crooned by Ray Charles, Cyndi Lauper performing "Working Class Hero," Sean Lennon singing "Dear Prudence"-and footage of Lennon singing "Imagine" and "Give Peace A Chance." There are Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr, David Bowie, Natalie Cole; the list goes on and on.

It's an uplifting experience: you feel John Lennon's genius—as a songwriter, performer, and human being.

On August 11, The Magical World of Disney presents Cheetah. Set against the splendor of the African veldt, it's the tale of two young Americans who befriend a young Masai-and an orphaned cheetah cub-while visiting their parents at a research station in Kenya. And August 25 brings the return of one of Disney's most beloved comedies: The Parent Trap. Hayley Mills plays identical twins, separated by their parents' divorce, who meet at summer camp. Trading places, the two hatch a wild and wacky scheme to reunite the battling adults. Brian Keith and Maureen O'Hara are the parents who add to the fun.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK: NO MORE GAMES

It's become fashionable in certain quarters to decry the popularity of The New Kids On The Block. But as noted rock critic Dave Marsh recently pointed out, The New Kids have fashioned some of the finest dance tunes around—and rock 'n' roll doesn't get any better than that. New Kids On The Block: No More Games illustrates Marsh's point:

dance fever at its finest. In this concert, taped at the Civic Center in Providence, Rhode Island, The New Kids are in top form, performing "I Believe in You," "Step By Step," "Stay with Me Baby," "Valentine Girl," "Games," "Hangin' Tough"—and more of their favorite hits. So kick back, or better yet, clear the living room floor, and dance, people—dance!

TWO JOURNEYS TO ADVENTURE

Journeys are the common theme of two films on The Best of Hollywood (Mondays at 9:00 p.m., ET/PT) in August. Raquel Welch, Stephen Boyd, and Donald Pleasence star in the 1966 sci-fi thriller Fantastic Voyage (August 5), in which a medical team is miniaturized and injected inside a scientist's body. (Who can forget Raquel Welch in her diving suit being attacked by antibodies?) On August 12, Walter Pidgeon is Admiral Nelson, creator of the super atomic submarine Seaview in Irwin Allen's classic Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea. (Will Admiral Nelson save the Earth from being incinerated by its own radiation belts?) Also appearing on The Best of Hollywood in August are two more classics: Clifton Webb in Cheaper by the Dozen; and Barbra Streisand in her Oscarwinning role in Funny Girl.

The Magical World of Disney SUMMER ANIMATION FESTIVAL

The Disney Channel's Summer Animation Festival continues in July and August. On July 7, in the spirit of Independence Day, The Magical World of Disney presents Festival of Folk Heroes. Drawn from classic Disney animated shorts, the film features such legendary Americans as Pecos Bill, Paul Bunyan and his Blue Ox Babe, Johnny Appleseed, and the immortal Casey at the Bat.

On July 14, Maroon Cartoon star Roger Rabbit finds himself framed for murder—and threatened by the sinister Judge Doom—in the revolutionary film, Who Framed Roger Rabbit. A marvel of moviemaking, Roger Rabbit blends live-action and animation in a seamless whole. This gripping film noir tale stars Bob Hoskins, Christopher Lloyd, Stubby Kaye, Continues

CANINE CLASSIC

Our film salute to Lassie continues with The Disney Channel premiere on August 31 of Son of Lassie, the sequel to the 1943 hit Lassie Come Home. In this 1945 outing, Lassie's son Laddie goes off to war! Son of Lassie stars a young Peter Lawford, June Lockhart, Donald Crisp and Nigel Bruce (the last two repeating their roles from the original film).

At The Disney-MGM Studios THE DISNEY CHANNEL TV TRYOUTS

Beginning July 1 at The Disney-MGM Studios, park guests will have a unique opportunity: on a special soundstage they can participate in an audition experience. Various guests in the audience will, in the form of an audition, be asked to strut their stuff in scenarios that range from song and dance to comedy and even improvisation! It's a real chance for guests to show their talents. But that's not all—because the best of these guest auditions will have a larger audience than the participating groups at The Disney-MGM Studios. Select Disney Channel TV Tryouts will be presented on The Disney Channel itself. "It's a really fun event that allows park guests to be a true part of the magic of television," says Mike Nichols of The Disney Channel. "And adding to the fun is the fact that people might see themselves on TV."

THE DISNEY CHANNEL TV TRYOUTS AIR SUNDAYS AFTER AVONLEA AND BEFORE THE MAGICAL WORLD OF DISNEY, ON MONDAY PRECEDING AVONLEA, AND ON SATURDAY AFTER THE 7:00 P.M. MOVIE, BEGINNING IN MID-JULY.

Behind the Scenes THE ROCKETEER: EXCITEMENT IN THE AIR

Playing Cliff Secord in The Rocketeer, Bill Campbell is transformed from a daredevil stunt pilot into a hero when he acquires a fantastic rocket-jet backpack. In

The Rocketeer: Excitement in the Air, Campbell is transformed into your host for a behind-the-scenes look at the making of this Disney summer adventure film, which also marks Joe Johnston's first directorial effort since his hit Honey, I Shrunk the Kids. But that's not all—Campbell in the course of the special also examines man's dreams of, and attempts at, flight through the ages, from Leonardo da Vinci to the Wright Brothers. It's an entertaining half-hour, which premieres August 11.

FALL PREVIEW

Beginning Thursday, August 22, and continuing through Sunday, August 25, The Disney Channel will present a four-day national preview, featuring great films, specials, and series. Various highlights: DuckTales: The Movie, Mother Goose Rock 'N' Rhyme, Rodgers and Hammerstein's Cinderella, New Kids On The Block: No More Games!, and Avonlea.

QUEEN GALADRIEL

A fantasy collector doll. Inspired by the beautiful heroine of The Lord of the Rings.

The first issued under license from the estate of I.R.R. Tolkien.

She was the guiding light in J.R.R. Tolkien's unforgettable fantasy, The Lord of the Rings.

And now, the same artist who has captured the vision of Tolkien's world for millions creates a magnificent collector doll.

A glittering portrayal of Queen Galadriel by acclaimed fantasy artist Greg Hildebrandt. His very first collector doll. A golden vision. Her luxuriant tresses cascading in radiant profusion. Her stunning features painted by hand on fine imported bisque porcelain. Her gracefully sculptured hands and legs are also crafted of luminous bisque.

On her left hand, the Ring of Nenya, handpainted in 24 karat gold. And in her right, a fully faceted crystal.

Costumed in luxuriant charmeuse, its folds flowing to the ground. Billowy sleeves are lined with rich gold lamé. A golden chain accents the bodice, and glistens with an inlaid pendant set with a faux pearl. Her waist is encircled by a wide mesh belt that sparkles with faux gemstones.

As a Queen, she wears a golden crown and a dazzling cape of shimmering golden fabric. Priced at $295, payable in convenient monthly installments.

Environment CHILDREN WANT TO SAVE THE PLANET

The idea of saving the earth makes sense to children. Most kids love the outdoors, for playing, reading in the shade of a tree, lying in the grass with a dream or two. So it's not difficult to convince them to take care of their world, once they know it's threatened.

The most obvious way for them to help out is with daily recycling -separating paper, glass, metal, and now plastics. Most communities have some facility for recycling—if not curbside pickup, then a recycling center not too far away, which kids could enjoy visiting. And what's happening with plastics is important: until recently it was thought that plastic would be forever unrecyclable, but technology is finding more and more ways to give plastic a second life and keep it from piling up, permanent litter to the earth. This spring the Council for Solid Waste Solutions released its Blueprint for Plastics Recycling, whose goal is to have the majority of American consumers participate in plastics recycling programs by 1995, compared with only 10 percent today. The best news for parents is that even toddlers can help with plastics.

But recycling isn't the only thing children can do to help. There's plenty more that can be done, and there are a number of inexpensive, easy-to-read books to get them interested, providing information and suggestions. Three that we found in a neighborhood bookstore are: A Kid's Guide to How to Save the Planet, by Billy Goodman (An Avon Camelot Book, $2.95); 365 Ways For You and Your Children to Save the Earth One Day At a Time, by Michael Viner with Pat Hilton (Warner Books, $5.95); 50 Simple Things Kids Can Do To Save the Earth, The Earthworks Group (Andrews and McMeel, $6.95).

Leisure Activities BUG COLLECTING: A NATURAL HOBBY FOR KIDS

Kids are fascinated with bugs. But they usually need some help to turn their raw interest into something that will provide them with real information or a collection. Parents who encourage children to explore an interest in insects can help their children develop basic science skills as well as learn to appreciate nature. And, as more and more natural history museums are opening insect zoos, it's getting easier to stimulate that interest.

"Insects are in the everyday world, and kids have a natural affinity for them," says Arthur Evans, D.Sc., director of the Insect Zoo at the Museum of Natural History in Los Angeles. Yet, he says, many adults are afraid of insects, and grownups' reluctance to explore the world of insects may rob children of a wonderful entree to science.

Evans, who admits to being somewhat afraid of spiders, sees bug collecting as a great introduction to natural history. "It's so immediate, and whether you like insects or hate them, they're fascinating and many are aesthetically pleasing."

Studying bugs, he says, trains children in the scientific method. Kids improve their observational skills and learn to hypothesize, study and draw conclusions.

Bug watchers can also keep a journal of their insect-related observations, sketching bugs in their natural habitats and noting important facts, such as when a bug was spotted in the garden, where it was found, and what it was doing.

The best way to start, Evans suggests, is to get a few general books on insects from the library.

Learn strategies for collecting bugs and look for information on those insects that the child has seen or has wondered about. As for supplies, Evans says that all a child needs is a pair of eyes and an inquisitive mind, but a simple magnifying glass, a couple of jars, a net and a notebook are good to have.

More serious young scientists may want to learn how to pin and preserve insects, a process that requires special tools that are widely available by mail order. Pinning boards, labels—"A specimen without a label is worthless," says Evans—and styrofoam blocks are used to keep bugs intact for study and long-term collection.

Evans recommends that parents learn enough about insects to steer their children away from those that bite and sting, and he encourages them to teach children to treat all bugs with great respect. Permits may be required for bug collection in national, state and county parks, so permission—which is usually given—should be sought before any insects are removed.

For Evans and many others, what's especially exciting about bug collecting is that it's an area of science in which amateurs can make important discoveries. "There's enormous potential for new discovery because very little is known about the vast variety of insects and basic bug biology."

So not only can budding bug scientists develop important skills, it's quite possible they will spot a certain bug in a specific place, for example, that will actually contribute to the field of knowledge if it's reported to a natural history museum or entomology club.

Health & Fitness JUST SAY YES— TO FITNESS

Fitness can be fun and it's good for children, but now there are more reasons than that to get children hooked on sports. A recent campaign by the Partnership for a Drug-Free America recently ran full-page newspaper ads saying: "Kids need something better to do than drugs. Like sports.

Dance. Or music. Because good things can be habit-forming too."

That's true, says Michael Nelson, M.D., an Albuquerque, New Mexico, pediatrician and chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics' committee on sports medicine and fitness. Studies show that drug use by children involved in high school sports is significantly less than that of other high school students. What's habit-forming, Nelson says, is the positive sense of well-being that kids get from sports, and that generally translates into less desire to use drugs.

Nelson says the other little-known benefit of exercise is that, regardless of the intensity of the activity, it improves the learning skills and the academic performance of children. That's probably because of better concentration and general health, he says. The improved school performance also raises a child's self-esteem, further decreasing his chances of trying drugs.

Nelson adds that there's a difference between being physically active and being fit, and that just being active is probably enough. "For years we've been concerned about children's fitness levels, but now we know that just staying physically active, with less intense levels of exercise, is probably adequate," he observes. Sedentary children often show signs of depression, decreased appetite, insomnia and irritability.

The trick in getting children to say yes to sports is to make physical activity fun-and accessible. For latch-key children, for example, after-school outdoor exercise is a virtual impossibility, and in many of today's busy families, there seems to be almost no time for exercise. "The opportunities for physical activity are being systematically taken away," Nelson says, adding that physical education time in school has been reduced significantly in the last few years. According to the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, only 36 percent of children in grades 1 to 12 are enrolled in daily physical education.

But schools can't do it alone, says Steve Guback of the President's Council. "Kids should be getting physical education homework," he says, and parents should be offering their children a wide-ranging menu of fun activities to try.

Peter Vidmar, 1984 Olympic gold medalist in gymnastics, a member of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and a father of four, says the role of parents in family fitness is more critical now than ever before. Kids have less time in school for exercise and the fitness boom for adults hasn't trickled down to the kids. "Parents go out to the fitness center while their kids stay home and play videogames," Vidmar says.

Without role models, Nelson adds, children won't get involved in sports. Nelson advises parents to consciously make an effort to walk or cycle with their children, even if it's just for a quick trip to the grocery store.

Vidmar recommends that families aim for 30 minutes of aerobic exercise every other day, if possible. "The purpose is not to be an Olympic gold medalist, but to live a healthy life."

Kids in the Kitchen POCKETS FOR PICNICS

Pocket bread now comes in various sizes. It's easy to stuff with your favorite filling and less likely to fall apart than a sandwich made with regular bread. The hollow part of a celery stalk is another useful pocket, for cream cheese, peanut butter, or whatever spread you like.

If you're hiking and don't want to carry a picnic bag or even a knapsack, you've still got the pockets of your shorts. You needn't go hungry or thirsty. Put small plastic bags of granola in your pockets, and sling over your shoulder a canteen filled with water or juice.

GRANOLA RECIPE FOR KIDS

3 cups oatmeal

1/2 cup wheat germ

1/2 cup sunflower seeds

1/2 cup raw cashews or almonds

1/4 cup vegetable oil

1/2 cup honey

1/2 cup raisins

(optional, to be added at the end)

- 1. Preheat oven to 225 degrees.
- 2. Measure ingredients, all except the raisins, into a large mixing bowl and mix with a spoon, or fingers, if you've already washed your hands.
- 3. Spread over the bottom of a baking dish or roasting pan.
- 4. Roast for no more than 1½ hours. After 45 minutes, stir mixture and check for browning. Some ovens brown faster than others. The nuts should be only slightly browned, not dark.

Granola can be microwaved. We split the mixture in half so that it barely covered the bottom of a microwave dish (that way it gets crunchy), and put the microwave oven on high for 3 minutes, stirred the mixture, and put it back in on high for 2 more minutes, but our oven is slow. MASTERS n the fall of 1941 a meeting took place at a farmhouse outside of Doylestown, Pennsylvania, that would forever alter the course of American musical theater. The farmhouse belonged to lyricist and writer Oscar Hammerstein II; his visitor was the composer Richard Rodgers. Rodgers posed a simple yet delicate question: Would Hammerstein be his collaborator for a musical based on a play that Rodgers had secured the rights to, a play entitled Green Grow the Lilacs?

The two men had long been friends. Rodgers had met Hammerstein in 1915, when, as a schoolboy, he had attended a Columbia University Varsity Review in which Hammerstein, then a college junior, had performed. In the hermetic world of New York's musical theater, the world of Tin Pan Alley and The Great White Way, the two were peers. Hammerstein had worked with the likes of Gershwin and Jerome Kern (most successfully with the latter on the 1927 Broadway hit Showboat). Rodgers in collaboration with Lorenz Hart—a collaboration begun in 1918—had also left his mark on Broadway with such shows as Pal Joey. But therein lay the delicacy of Rodgers' question:

his partnership with Lorenz Hart.

Hammerstein was keen to work with Rodgers, but suggested that Hart should continue in his role as Rodgers's lyricist. If Hart was unable to complete the project. Hammerstein would help out. But the partnership of Rodgers and Hart was finished. Hart was unenthusiastic about Green Grow the Lilacs. Physically and mentally exhausted, despondent and alcoholic, he was headed on a sojourn to Mexico. Thus began the partnership of Rodgers and Hammerstein, which bore fruit on March 31, 1943, with the Broadway premiere of Oklahoma! It was a relationship that spanned 17 years, until Hammerstein's death in 1960, and it produced a series of unparalleled Broadway—and later, Hollywood—triumphs.

It would be near impossible to exaggerate the impact Rodgers and Hammerstein exerted on the American musical. That Broadway shows had become impoverished was a common sentiment in the '20s and '30s—and changing that situation had been of paramount concern for both Rodgers and Hammerstein before their collaboration. Rodgers and Hart had gone so far as to call their works "musical plays"; Hammerstein and Kern's Showboat had also sought a theatrical ideal where music and story were integral, one to the other.

Oklahoma! set the pattern for Rodgers and Hammerstein's methods and success. Now, the source material—in this case the play Green Grow the Lilacs—would dictate the musical techniques and numbers, not vice versa. Nor would the pair be content with sprightly musical numbers draped about a featherweight plot; their work would not shirk content. The musical play would be just that: a seamless whole, where dialogue flowed into song and music, and song and music advanced the drama or the comedy.

Oklahoma!, State Fair, Carousel, South Pacific, The King and I, The Sound of Music—the titles indicate the influence Rodgers and Hammerstein exerted on Broadway—and in film—over their 17 years together. The fullest measure of their influence is felt today: Would there have been an Evita, or a Les Miserables, or a Phantom of the Opera without their pioneering? More important, can the body of their work ever be surpassed in its richness and diversity? Thirty-one years after this remarkable partnership came to an end, the names of Rodgers and Hammerstein remain linked in the public consciousness with the golden era of American musicals.

Enchanted Evenings

The largest festival ever shown on television of films and documentaries featuring the works of Rodgers & Hammerstein, airing on The Best of Hollywood and Sunday Night Showcase. (See page 34 for complete playdates.)

Flower Drum Song

Flower Drum Song was the penultimate musical the duo created. It was adapted for the silver screen in 1961, a year after Oscar Hammerstein's death.

Oklahoma!

Twelve years passed before Rodgers & Hammerstein's first musical was adapted for film. Shirley Jones, who played Laurie in the film, had appeared in the chorus of the Broadway production of South Pacific.

South Pacific

Rodgers and Hammerstein decreed that the musical's source—play or book—would determine the musical techniques they employed. In adapting James Michener's first book, Tales of the South Pacific, Rodgers & Hammerstein created two immortal and romantic tunes: "Bali Hai" and "Some Enchanted Evening."

The King and I

Other actors may assay the part, but the role of Asian potentate caught up in the mystifying ways of the modern world will always belong to Yul Brynner. This is the first time since 1985 that the film has aired on television—and the first time it has ever been aired uncut and, of course, without commercial interruption.

Mary Martin in the Sound of American Music

Mary Martin hosts this superb overview of the works of Rodgers and Hammerstein. The special includes interview segments with Rodgers, Hammerstein, Joshua Logan, Rouben Mamoulian, and others.

Oklahoma! and South Pacific: The Making of the Movie Musicals

A behind-the-scenes look at how Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical plays were transferred from stage to screen.

Rodgers & Hammerstein's Cinderella

A television classic! This 1965 television musical with Leslie Ann Warren, Stuart Damon, Celeste Holm, Walter Pidgeon and Ginger Rodgers had been performed once before in the mid-'50s, during the days of live television. That first version of Cinderella starred a then-unknown named Julie Andrews.

An eccentric jillionaire leads a group of young adventurers into the sands of the desert, searching for the fabled lost treasure of Collie Baba. But Scrooge McDuck, his charges Huey, Louie, Dewey, Webbigail Vanderquack, and featherbrained pilot Launchpad McQuack are fated to discover more than mere riches in The Disney MovieToons presentation of DuckTales: The Movie—Treasure of the Lost Lamp. Awaiting them in the desert is a genie who wants to be a real boy, an evil wizard named Morlock, and Morlock's incompetent cohort Dijon.

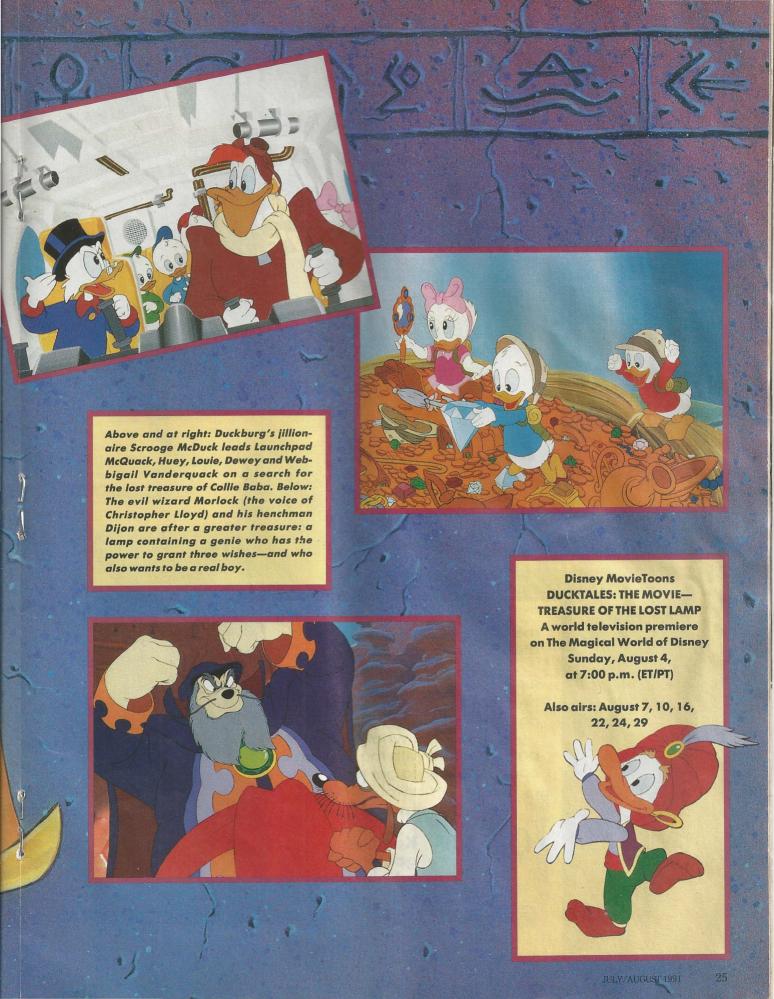

DuckTales: The Movie, featuring the stars of the wildly popular afternoon series DuckTales, is a lighthearted romp through the derring-do adventure movies of the '30s, '40s, '50s—and '80s. It's also a tribute to the wacky and irreverent slapstick style of the classic Disney comics books. Which is fitting, since the star getting top "billing" is none other than Scrooge McDuck, the skinflint jillionaire first introduced in the 1947 comic book Christmas on Bear Mountain.

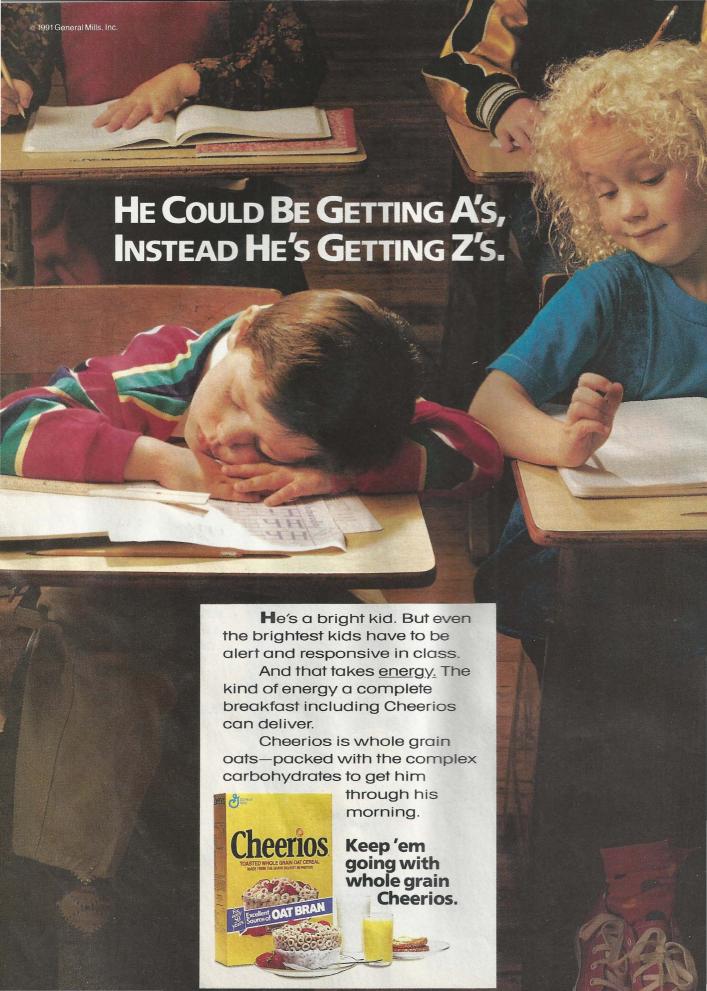

A comic book hero until 1967, when he appeared in the 17-minute short Scrooge McDuck and Money, Scrooge also appeared in the 1983 featurette Mickey's Christmas Carol, playing you-know-who. Now-grown Baby Boomers will be delighted to know that, since 1983, the voice of Scrooge McDuck has been provided by Alan Young, who once played straightman to a talking horse named Mister Ed. Young co-wrote the record album Mickey's Christmas Carol, the source for the 1983 featurette.

"Scrooge walked into my heart," Young says. "I love doing that voice and the character is second nature to me now. Sometimes when I come home from a recording session, my wife says, 'You know, you're not speaking English yet.'"

Young isn't the only famous name providing the voice of a character in DuckTales: The Movie. Christopher Lloyd of Back to the Future fame gives voice to the evil wizard Morlock, and antic comedian Rip Taylor plays the genial genie.

With animated adventure, comical chaos, magical mayhem and a battle between good and evil, DuckTales: The Movie is a joyous salute to the Golden Era of Hollywood—and to the zany spirit of the Disney comic books. It's Scrooge McDuck's finest hour.
